

Legal adaptation between selling Human organs and donating it.

By

Nadeen Abdallah Mohammad Alkiswani

Supervisor

Mohammad Abu Baker

Al-Zaytoonah University of Jordan,2020

Abstract

This study, which was titled Contract for the donation of human organs, dealt with the most important legal provisions related to the subject of selling and donating human organs, where it clarified the differences between the process of selling and donating human organs, whereas the donation of human organs has its sole provisions to distinguish it.

One of exclusive problems raised by this study is the lack of precise legal regulations for the process of donating human organs, which led to the many legal opinions between the legislations, also the jurisprudence differences regarding donation, as some authorized the process of donating human organs and others did not authorize it, especially that some legislations did not address the Donation as a topic where it was left to the general rules.

the researcher in this study was able to explain the legal basis on which the sale of human organs is considered invalid and the legal basis that permitted the organ donation with a balance between the interest of both donor and the donor .

This study brought forth some results and recommendations, where one of the most important results of this study is, the nullity of the contract for the sale of human organs, and the special nature for the donation of human organs contract, it is also necessary according to this study recommendations.

Keywords : donation, sale, human organs.